A thousand years in this world and another thousand how beautifully deceptive you are, my soul
and how wonderful is my time, what splendid company.

These are days of decorated windows season songs
saved souls on land and at sea.

We had furious days
with no acts of love
no peaceful winds.

Only passages and passages, passages of time.

Endless hours like constellations and waves as merciless as the eyes of memory, another memory and it's not enough yet, vanished things, faces and then the future.

Future encounters of beautiful and wicked lovers will be clashes
will be like hunting with dogs and wild boars will be run-ups, bites and troubles for another thousand years.

A thousand years in this world and another thousand
how beautifully deceptive you are, my soul
and how wonderful is my time, what splendid company.

I spied on myself while illuding myself and failing miscarrying kids like dreams.
I watched myself crying in a mirror made out of snow
I watched myself laughing
I watched myself from behind while I was leaving.

I greet you from tomorrow's countries which are visions of peasant souls flying around the world.

A thousand years in this world and another thousand
how beautifully deceptive you are, my soul
and how wonderful is my time, what solitude, what splendid company.
